FDP on HBS simulation is organized by RCBS exclusively for B School Faculty on June 23rd & 24th 2018. What is Simulation? Simulations are powerful tools for reinforcing student learning, set in seemingly real-world environments. They are simple to set up and extremely user friendly as teaching tools in classrooms and can be used across courses and programmes. Simulations facilitate “Learning by doing” and hence is a very rigorous and effective method of teaching. This FDP emphasis on ACTIVE participation and adequate hands-on exposure. The FDP seeks to familiarise the participants with the techniques needed to integrate SIMs (simulations) within a course and equip them with the necessary skills. It is conducted with content support from Harvard Business Publishing. The workshop is intended as a general introduction for instructors from all disciplines. The workshop covers a broad range of topics, including:

- ✦ Setting up a class for using SIMs
- ✦ Experience of using a Harvard SIM
- ✦ Group work vs individual work
- ✦ Designing classroom teaching plans around SIMs
- ✦ Gaining Clarity through hands-on participation and Q&A Sessions
- ✦ Debrief and wrap-up
